THE CRAFTING PROCESS

HOW OUR HONEYCOMBS ARE MADE AND WHY THEY ARE SO UNIQUE?

Our bees are gently collecting the nectar from the flowers.

For a single box of BioComb, the bees visit more than one million flowers.

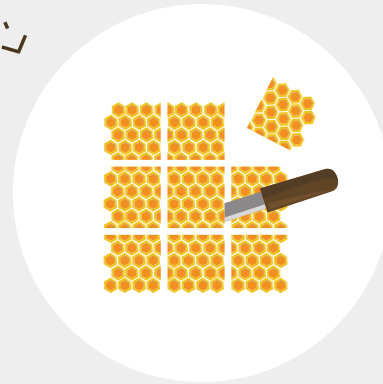

Back in the hive, the bees convert this nectar into honey and store it in wax cells.

One BioComb contains about 360 wax hexagon cells full of honey.

When taken from the hive honeycombs are strictly inspected for any impurities.

Impurities such as pollen grains or brood are not accepted in BioComb.

Impurities such as pollen grains or brood are not accepted in BioComb.

Cutting is made by hand by a special thermo-controlled cutting device.

The final product is stored in special warehouse, ready to be shipped worldwide.

Temperature and humidity levels are strictly controlled to preserve BioComb's health and nutritional properties.
